The Art of Love

Satya Narayana Dasa and Partap Chauhan

Everyone is looking for happiness. Some seek it in food, some in sports, wealth, or sex, but real happiness is found only in love. Unfortunately, most people don't know what love is, so it keeps slipping through their fingers. If a business venture fails, the entrepreneur hires a consultant to examine the reasons for the failure. But when we fail in love, we never think to learn the basics. We assume we already know what love is and how to get it. That misconception leads to more failure and frustration.

If you are serious about love, then you need to know what it takes to attain it. This workshop will teach you the alpha and omega of pure love and dispel all misconceptions. You will learn the fundamental concepts—everything you need to achieve success on the path of love, feel the presence of love all around you, and know life's deepest fulfillment.

Satya Narayana Dasa, PhD, is the author of 15 books related to Indian culture and philosophy. Founder of the Jiva Institute of Vedic Studies to promote Vedic culture, philosophy, and Ayurveda through education, he regularly teaches classes on Hindu philosophy, the Sanskrit language, and ancient Indian sciences for scholars from around the world. He has initiated a program for preservation, translation, and publication of ancient Indian works of science and wisdom, and serves as a visiting professor at the State University of New Jersey, Rutgers, and American Hindu University. Winner of many honors and awards, he maintains an office in Vrindavan, India. www.vrajababaji.com

Partap Chauhan, BAMS, is a silver medalist in Ayurveda from the University of Delhi, India, and has studied under the renowned Ayurvedic scholar Shri Nanak Chand, an expert in Ayurvedic Rasa Sastra. He launched the Jiva Institute with his family in 1992, and has a thriving Ayurvedic clinic and panchakarma center in Faridabad, India. He travels extensively, teaching Ayurveda in more than 30 countries, and has established training programs in Ayurveda in India. Although he practices an ancient Indian medical science, Partap makes optimum use of modern technology in his quest to spread Ayurveda to every corner of the world.
